Henry Cabot Lodge Delivers Oration Before Govt. Representatives.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9 .- In almost every city and hamlet of the land Americans gathered today and paid tribute to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt, acclaimed the greatest world figure of his time.

In the house of representatives the officials of the three branches of the government joined with the envoys of foreign nations in honor of the man who achieved the greatest personal following in the country's history and left a lasting impress on the development of the American re-

The simplicity that characterized the great citizen was reflected in the ceremonies. The only oration was delivered by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who, in accents betraying the intensity and arand analyzed the qualities of his life- | seats, the senate today took up the Above All a Patriot.

The voice of the venerable statesman broke as he concluded his eulogy with these words from the "Pilgrim's Press": "So Valiant-for-Truth passed the decision. Suffrage workers, beover and all the trumpets sounded for him on the other side."

Summing up Roosevelt's character in the midst of an address which held the attention of the distinguished assemblage for more than two hours Senator Lodge said

"He was a great patriot, a great man; above all a great American. His country was the ruling passion of his life from the beginning even to the end. There was no hour when he would not turn aside from everything else to preach the doctrine of Americanism, of the principles and of the faith upon which American government rested and which all true Amer icans should wear in the heart of hearts."

Assemblage Is Impressive.

The gathering was assembled in the most impressive manner. First came the United States senate, led by Vice President Marshall, followed by the generals of the army, headed by Gen. March, chief of staff, and the admirals of the navy and the commandant of the marine corps, Applause swept the chamber as the doorkeeper announced "the ex-president of the United States, William Howard Taft." Mr. Taft took a seat in front of the chamber.

The diplomatic corps was next ushered in, led by the Spanish ambassador, Senor Riano y Gayangos.

A TREE CENSUS.

The Hardwood Record of Chicago says that the United States may shortly take a census of its trees and that we shall then know how many trees we have, and the probable number of board feet of usable lumber, just as we have figures on the corn and wheat crop, the herds of cattle and Probably this is all right. After the fight between the wooden ship men and the steel advocates, it may be well to know whether we have lumber sufficient to build a fleet that can lick the Swiss navy, and where supplies of needed kinds of wood are located. But somehow, to measure our forests in board feet is reminiscent of the man who stood on top of a hill and, looking over miles of beautiful Lake Superior country, made no comment on the peauty of the scene but counted the number of diamond drills visible from where he stood.

Statistics are valuable. But surely far more important than a knowledge of their number is a knowledge of the care of trees, and the habit of replacing them when they are destroyed.

GERMANY STILL A TROUBLEMAKER.

Thus far in the proceedings Germany has not been whipped. Whether she will be the ultimate gainer by the war remains to be seen when the peace conference adjourns. But the fact must not be overlooked that Germany suffered very little industrially during the war. She hopes, and probably expects to resume her place in the commercial world-dominant in many particulars. She hopes to regain her control of dyestuffs, potash, cutlery and numerous other industries. She is today wide awake and active in preparing for the industrial war about to be waged. Shall we neglect preparedness for that contest?

Director General Hines, testifying before the senate interstate commerce committee, hit the McAdoo trail and advocated a five-year extension of rail control, giving almost the same reasons often reiterated by his predecessor. Mr. Hines says he personally does not believe in government ownership, yet one of his reasons for a five-year extension is that "it will give the advocates of government ownership full opportunity to press their views without being influenced by the temporary reaction against government control." The new director general also says the roads should be relinquished before the expiration of the twenty-one months unless a fiveyear extension is granted. Government ownership seems to be an objective of the administration, judging by the attitude of those connected with railroad administration.

Officials of the United States free employment service charge that private fee-charging agencies are lobbying for the abolishment of the govern ment service. Members of congress have been circularized and many manufacturers have been asked to assist in the campaign. Just now, when demobilization is being rapidly accomplished and thousands of returned sol diers are seeking employment, would be a most inopportune time for the free bureaus to be discontinued and the profiteers turned loose on the boys from overseas.

Will Germany appreciate the humanitarian motives of some factions in the peace conference who are disposed not to punish them too harshly? We believe that if Germany is not made to pay to the very limit of her powers for generations to come that Germans will sneer and snicker in their homes time during the day or before retiring over the softness of their enemies. The surest way to bring the realization of her crime and errors home to Germany would be to do to her what she would have done had she been victorious.

Germans are mobilizing to fight the Poles on the borders of West Prussia, and bolshevists in large numbers face a Germany army on the East Prussian frontier. There has been some fighting. It will be difficult to make peace unless the warring elements lay down their arms and remain quiet while negotiations are going on.

If newspapers penetrate to the frozen, God-forsaken reaches of northern Russia, where American soldiers are fighting and dying in a seemingly futile and useless warfare against the Russian reds, it must be interesting to them to read the bulletins from the "Peace Conference."

No, of course not.

Perhaps you don't know it, but Dixon occupies the same position when it comes to tractor plows that the above localities do to the products mentioned.

The Grand Detour Plow Co. makes and sells more tractor plows than any other organization in the world. We ship them not only to all sections of North and South America, but to France [where German prisoners are using them nowadays] Italy, England, Mesopotamia, Java, Serbia, Greece, Russia--in fact, wherever tractors are used, our plows are well and favorably known.

CHAPTER XXVII-Sabron returns to

CHAPTER XXVIII-Pitchoune, coming uninvited upon Julia and Sabron, finds himself for the first time de trop, but is happy in their love for each other and for him.

Later, when the others had left them to themselves in the music room, Sabron sat in a big chair by the open window and Julia Redmond played to him. The day was warm. There was a smell of spring flowers in the air and the vases were filled with girofles and sweet peas. But Sabron smelled only the violets in Julia's girdle. Her hands gently wandered over the keys, finding the tune that Sabron longed to hear. She played the air through, and it seemed as though she were about to sing the first verse. She could not do so, nor could she speak.

Sabron rose and came over to where she sat.

There was a low chair near the piano and he took it, leaning forward, his hands clasped about his knees, It had been the life-long dream of this simple-hearted officer that one day he would speak out his soul to the woman he loved. The time had come She sat before him in her unpretentious dress. He was not worldly enough to know it cost a great price, nor to appreciate that she wore no jewels-nothing except the flowers he had sent. Her dark hair was clustered about her ears and her beautiful eyes lost their fire in tenderness.

"When a man has been very close to death, Mademoiselle, he looks about for the reason of his resurrection. When he returns to the world, he looks to see what there is in this life to make it worth living. I am young -at the beginning of my career. I may have before me a long life in which, with health and friends, I may find much happiness. These things certainly have their worth to a normal man-but I cannot make them real before my eyes just yet. As I upon the world to which I have and her love. If I cannot win her for lars, A. E. Finally, everything merged into his present life, and the beauty of what he said dazed her like an enchanted sea. He was a soldier, a man of action, yet a dreamer. The fact that his hopes were about to be realized made him tremble, and as he follows talked, everything took light from this victory. Even his house in Normandy 1918. Julia laid her hand on Pitchoune's head. "He will love the Normandy beach, Charles."

"He will love the forests," said Sabron; "there are rabbits there." On the little dog's head the two hands met and clasped. "Pitchoune is the only one in the world who is not de trop," said Julia gently.

Sabron, lifting her hand again to his lips, kissed it long, looking into her eyes. Between that great mystery of the awakening to be fulfilled, they drew near to each other-nearer.

Pitchoune sat before them, waiting. He wagged his tail and waited. No one noticed him. He gave a short bark that apparently disturbed no Pitchoune had become de trop. He was discreet. With sympathetic eyes he gazed on his beloved master and new mistress, then turned and quietly trotted across the room to the hearth-rug, sitting there meditative ly for a few minutes blinking at the empty grate, where on the warm spring day there was no fire.

Pitchoune lay down before the fireless hearth, his head forward on his paws, his beautiful eyes still discreetly turned away from the lovers. He drew a long contented breath as dogs do before settling into repose. His thrilling adventures had come to an end. Before fires on the friendly hearth of the Louis XIII chateau, where hunting dogs were carved in the stone above the chimney, Pitchoune might continue to dream in the days to come. He would hunt rabbits in the still forests above the wheat fields, and live again in the firelight his great adventures on the desert, the long runs across the sands on his journey back to France.

Now he closed his eyes. As a faithful friend he rested in the atmosphere of happiness about him. He had been the sole companion of a lonely man, now he had become part of a family.

THE END.

You may be able to find it on the may; if not, it is near Besnancon, a pretty large city we went through. At Ornans, we left the train and took motor trucks about 15 miles to a little town called Etrey. Battery C was the only battery there, the rest of the regiment was scattered around in other small towns.

We were there about a week. Then I and three or four others went to Ornans for special training. I wrote you several letters from this place. You remember about me writing, about the old town I was in and how we ate cherries every time we had time to go after them, and here is where I spent the 4th of July.

The school lasted a bout 5 weeks and by the time we went back to our battery that had moved to a camp near the town of Etrey. Here we went to the artillery range and had thout three weeks' real practice in located in a valley here with a main every thing. This was only about an eighteen-hour trip. I forgot the name of the town we unloaded at up near the front, but we were there one day and from this place our traveling at night began, as we left there in the vening and hiked all night. No one was allowed to even light a match. The worst of but our guns and a couple of wagons. it was we couldn't smoke as we had been used to doing on hikes. But we didn't mind it much as we didn't want any German aeroplanes to see us moving. In day time we would halt in some woods along the road and stay under cover all day and hike again at night. We had a couple of nights' hike before we camped to the front, or near there, as we weren't right on the front yet. Here we camped in a thick woods for about a week.

About this time it began to rain and it rained about every other day from then on and here is where the hardship started, as we were about 11/2 miles back in the woods from the main road. Well, these mud roads in the woods got cut up till lots of giving again. Last year I was over places a wagon would drop in to the hub with hardly any load on. I became a driver about the time we landed in this place. # What Fordson Service Will Do For You

There are two big factors to consider when you are buying a tractor-both equally important—the tractor itself and the service rendered.

A tractor which is standing idle because the service station is far away or because the dealer hasn't the proper parts is a poor investment, no matter how well the tractor itself may be made.

Fordson Tractors are selling by the thousands every month and are giving universal satisfaction all over the world because of this:

The tractor itself is made as durable, dependable, efficient and economical as the best engineering skill, the finest materials and workmanship can make it.

And added to this, wherever a Fordson Tractor is sold, you will find parts and service as quickly and easily available as the kerosene you put into the tank.

Our service means this to you. First, that we will thoroughly instruct you how to get the most out of your tractor-how to operate it properly so as to avoid troublehow to make all minor repairs and adjustments so that only on rare occasions will you have to call for help.

Then when you do require help for repair work or parts you will find us ready at a moment's notice. Our stock of parts is complete, our mechanics are experts.

Fordson service is delivered to your farm. To own a Fordson means that you own a durable, dependable, economical tractor that will serve you every working day in the year.

The Fordson Company make it durable and dependable. We keep it so.
